Program Requirements

For more than 50 years, uOttawa's Faculty of Law has been offering programs in both official languages in the two most widely used legal systems in the world, Common Law and Civil Law. The Programme de droit canadien (PDC) allows students to earn both a JD and an LLL in three years, thus opening the doors to the practice of law across Canada and abroad.

Students in this program must meet the Common Law Section major paper requirement.

Students in this program cannot take a common law course whose content is substantially the same as that of a civil law course they have taken as part of this program. Similarly, they cannot take a civil law course that is substantially the same as a common law course they have taken as part of the program.

In light of the PDC's mandate, a truly 'Canadian' legal education does not seem complete if it is limited to the study of the two European legal traditions. The aboriginal perspective brings a different approach to bear on legal questions which will enrich the program. The three units in aboriginal law can be completed by taking a traditional course, by completing a directed research or an internship.

Common Law academic regulations apply. With exception of the CGPA required to obtain both diplomas (GPA required: 4.0).
